THE NOMINEES AND PLATFORM.

The democratic national convention finished its labors at Denver last Friday and adjourned. W. J. Bryan, of Nebraska, as was announced in our last issue, was named for the presidency on the first ballot, receiving 89 1/2 votes to Johnson's 46 and Gray's 59 1/2. John W. Kern, of Indiana, was nominated for vice president by acclamation. A strong platform was adopted; yet its strength lies in its clear cut phrases with an absence of radicalism; and withal a plain, substantial declaration of principles, without dodging or equivocation, and barren of meaningless expressions. We may have occasion, from time to time, to quote from the Denver platform and compare the extracts with the expressions of that of the republicans adopted at Chicago; but shall not attempt to reproduce it in its entirety, as space will not permit.

The platform and candidates have been enthusiastically received by all sections of the country, with the exception of the extreme east, and even there the action of the convention has been ratified; yet the leaders are making few promises in that section. Labor leaders and laboring men are very much pleased with the declarations of the platform, and the candidates have been assured that labor will cast its fortunes with democracy. Capital, while dealt with in strong terms, has nothing to fear from the declarations in the democratic platform, if honestly acquired and legitimately directed; but unlawful combinations and trusts are denounced, and this class will bitterly oppose the election of the democratic nominees; for they realize that they must go out of business if the democrats succeed. They do not fear Taft, and herein lies the difference between the two men.

Every man who clings to the Roosevelt ideas can certainly say little against Bryan. The "interests" denounce both Roosevelt and Bryan, and yet Taft says he will carry out Roosevelt's policies. In view of the fact that the combinations of wealth that denounce Roosevelt and Bryan and are Taft's heartiest supporters indicates that the ex-secretary is just talking when he proclaims his intention of carrying out Roosevelt's policies. These "interests" and all men know where Bryan stands, and that is the reason corporations will try to defeat him. Their support of Taft must convince anyone open to conviction that Taft is not a sincere advocate of Roosevelt's policies. This seems the only logical conclusion.

The republican territorial convention will be held at Santa Fe on the 18th of August.
